Dear Jeff:

One short session is not long enough to incorporate your principles into my feeble mind, but I amazingly have retained some of the basic principles you teach. I heard you speak in February, at the 1994 Annual Convention of the Independent Bankers Association of America, held in Orlando, Florida.

Your message was a welcome approach to the struggles of life in today's sped up society. Although I have not yet read your book, I have found much solace in the handouts you had at the meeting. (They did not get sorted to "File-13" as much of my convention material did). In fact, I have been passing along some of your action steps (along with the name of your book and its author!).

I started attempting to draft this letter at approximately 8:45 a.m. It is now 10:30 a.m. and I have fielded at least ten incoming phone calls and made as many outgoing ones, answered staff questions, had one cup of coffee which was lukewarm by the time I got to drink it....and have completely scuttled my intended agenda for the day.

Nevertheless just for today, I am trying to concentrate on taking first things first....and trying desperately to remember to make a little "breathing space" for myself. I look forward to receiving your tape! It will be worn out by the time I make my usual treks across Kansas this summer.

Cordially,
