Dear Jeff,

Like everyone else who works with volunteers, elected officials and boards my frustration level sometimes reaches critical mass as increasingly I find myself in situations where my time and my choice of projects is not my own.

Thank you for helping me to look at my life with a new perspective. Thank you for helping me to realize that while I cannot control every situation, I can clean up my life enough around the edges that I am not totally overwhelmed each and every work day.

I have actually begun to practice what you preach. And as Judge Harry Stone's long lost father compares his mental state to his years in the Institution, "I'm MUCH better now."

Sincerely,

Rick Murphy
