Dear Mr. Davidson:

I don't know if you'll remember me at all, but I had to write you nonetheless. I attended a seminar in Nashville about a month ago at which you spoke.

I was fortunate enough to have "won" a copy of your book, Marketing for the Home-Based Business, which I just finished reading. It was marvelous!

Not only did you offer poignant insights into the challenges and solutions available to home-based entrepreneurs, but you inspired me to trash all the common precepts of the query/wait/query/wait/submission syndrome that has prevented me from making serious headway as a writer. I have just completed an article and am preparing to mail it out to 15 general markets. I will then look for profession-specific markets, tailor the article, and send it out again.

Thanks ever for some of the most valuable advice I have ever received.

Free at last,

Julie Saint-Anne
