Dear Jeff:

I attended your seminar in San Francisco on December 16, 1993. I enjoyed it very much. I have talked to so many people in the last several months who are feeling a sense of overload. They are overwhelmed by their workloads and their desire to balance their work and personal lives. I certainly am in the same camp.

I particularly appreciated the affirmation I received in your seminar that this sense of overload is not specific to me or the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. I also appreciated your ideas on how to get control of what we can. As a result of your comments about not receiving the Sunday paper, I finally switched channels on my radio and quite listening to the all news station. 'All news' translated into the daily violence report. I must say, I feel a lot more like getting out of bed in the morning after listening to some pleasant music instead of the violence report.

Sincerely,

Jane O. Bodmer
