Dear Jeff:

I had the opportunity to hear your presentation at our Scottsdale sales meeting of our National Office unit last week.

I very much enjoyed the presentation and feel a bit better-equipped to handle the speed of life with breathing balance.

Your message is timeless, although the effort you took to go into the mega realities certainly brought a context that was extremely valuable to our team, at the close of our conference. Thank you for your insight and for sharing that perspective and that context.

Sometimes people just need "permission" to do what they know is not only okay to take charge of one's life (day by day); it is required for life-long sanity and balance – intellectually, emotionally, spiritually, and physically.

Thank you for contributing to our successful conference and for your role in enabling this high-performance team we call "National" to continue their successful ways in this fast-paced, anxiety-filled reality.

Sincerely,

Kimball International, Inc.
